News from Rangely.

RANGELY, August 29 [by courier to Glenwood Springs August 30]. Yesterday afternoon a scouting party saw [illegible] companies Colonow and five other Indians riding over the recent battle ground hunting for dead Utes. By signals they expressed a desire to talk with Major Leslie, who was sent for. Under a flag of truce a talk was had, and the Utes made [illegible] of their stock in possession of the troops. Major Leslie told them the horses would be turned over to them upon the delivery of Colonow and the two horse thieves. This proposition was ignored. They complained bitterly of the attack, and said 15 Utes were dead and many and six others heap sick "methby pretty soon die." Breaking our is a passion [illegible] up here Colonow exclaimed, God damn cowboy. Put on pot diet coat; keep foot on the [illegible] militia. He said others up and fight white tactics but the white had fought from behind the rocks and [illegible] which they were looking for.

The Utes are unanimous [illegible] with the exception of [illegible] are willing who [illegible] in the vicinity watching an opportunity to [illegible] their ponies again. Last night they tried to stampede them, but the guard fired, rousing the entire [illegible] and frightening away the two Indians.

Old Colonow has not shown up since a day or two before the battle. The fact is there are two of them, and half the men who are hunting the chief do not know one from the other. He is old, nearly blind and quite deaf. He has to climb on a stone to mount his horse. There is every evidence to show that he was trying to get his stock people and himself back to the reservation; whether to stay in there or to return and give [illegible] is unknown.

Volunteers are leaving. Pray and his scouts have left. He and Leslie and Kennedy fell out over the horses captured. Pray and his men considered them as [illegible] as stated to your correspondent.

An ambulance has arrived for the bodies of Ward and Lieutenant Folsom.

The report has just arrived that a party which has been out to reconnoitre has returned that government troops have removed all of the Utes to the reservation except enough to care for their wounded, unable to be moved.

A number of Hooper's men have left him. Sixteen of Pritchard's scouts have arrived. There will be trouble about the Indian horses. The militia are expecting to be recalled. The wounded have started for the rear. Everybody is getting tired of the situation. The boys have not blankets enough, and poor shelter in storms. They are waiting and hoping to get orders to return. If they undertake to retreat with the ponies the Utes from the hills who are watching the captured stock will no doubt make an effort to regain it. The situation is a little serious.

The Governor at Meeker.

CAMP ADAMS, August 29.—Governor Adams and party arrived this evening and were tendered a reception by the mayor and county commissioners. Chevalier C. E. Wolff, the famous traveler and explorer, son of Fred Wolff, the explorer, is here to realize the excitement of an Indian scare. A magnificent horse owned by the Ute Gus was captured during the recent encounter. Yesterday he was ridden about the streets with red ribbons tied in his ears, which had been pierced.

MEEKER, August 30 4:30 p. m.—Governor Adams has sent a courier to the Indian camp, asking Colorow to meet him and General Crook in council. Crook is expected to-day.

Washington.

WASHINGTON, August 30.—General Terry telegraphs from Chicago to the war department to-day requesting that Indian Agent Byrns be instructed to move from his reservation all intruders, as the civil and military authorities of Colorado in their excitement may forget that state rights do not extend [illegible] the limit of their state and precipitate a general outbreak of reservation Indians by crossing the border. Telegraph instructions were sent this afternoon by the president to Governor Adams to confine the action of civil authorities strictly within the limits of the state.

General Terry also telegraphs from Chicago to the adjutant general that he has received a dispatch from Commander Randlett at Fort Duchesne saying Colorow and his followers are now at the Ouray agency and [illegible] position to remain on the reservation. Militia and cowboys hold 100 worthless ponies belonging to Colorow and Chief Ouray's widow. This was [illegible] claimed by the Indians as their festival [illegible] have been pursued [illegible] Reservation they [illegible] this matter [illegible] Colorow [illegible] Indians [illegible] Agent Byrns [illegible] Washington [illegible] Indians [illegible] Agent Byrns [illegible] Indians [illegible] Agent Byrns [illegible] Indians [illegible] Agent Byrns

R. W. WOODBURY,
Manager of the Gazette.

We gave a good deal of room this morning to the sermon preached by Mr. Gregg on Giving, last Sunday. Those who heard the sermon were very much impressed by its large ideas and noble sentiments. Those who failed to hear it will be glad to read it.

The poor mugwump is much excited at in these days because Mr. Cleveland has not lived up to his ideas of administrative reform. The knock would be very much more effective, however, if it could be shown to the mugwump that in voting for Mr. Blaine he could have done better. It is pretty clearly shown that the mugwump chose an evil in 1884, but it remains to be shown that he chose the worst evil. It is pretty hard to find a way to cast your vote for what you consider the best. One frequently votes for the least of two evils. If it can be shown to the mugwump that in voting for Mr. Cleveland he voted for the greater of two evils he will probably vote for the republican candidate in 1888. It will certainly be the best way the democratic leaders could do to [illegible] mugwumps of this fact. It won't have much of an effect to show them that they voted for an evil, because they know that already. The democratic party has too much to [illegible] intelligent man about it as it is on this subject. It was a lucky day for the wrong side during [illegible]

[illegible] that the statement [illegible] by [illegible] of the United States [illegible] reading the beginning of the [illegible] day is [illegible]. It would not be very much to the credit of the whites if they attacked the Indians while the truce was in force. The [illegible] of the dispatch [illegible] which came upon the day that news was received of the assassination of President Garfield to Governor Adams, stated that one of the reasons was in favor of doing just what the United States did was done last Thursday, on the ground that it was Indian [illegible]. If it did be true, then it is well that the whites were the [illegible] the case. If the Indians, on the other hand, had made the attack on our [illegible] the same circumstances it would have been white and delightful evidence of treachery, and would have been considered a reason for wiping the whole tribe from the face of the earth. We are glad to add that if this truce was violated Kendall and his party were the ones who did it and not the [illegible]

[illegible] are getting ready for [illegible] but strange to say neither party has presented any clearly defined issues. The republican papers and leaders satisfy themselves with criticising the manner in which Cleveland has carried out or failed to carry out his promises of civil service reform. The democratic leaders cannot meet this criticism because they stand on the first two years of Cleveland's administration in condemning whatever he did to carry out his pledges. The democratic party is in the worst position because it has shown itself clearly hostile to that in Cleveland's administration which has given him the confidence of the conservative people. If Cleveland is re-elected it will be because the people believe that he can give the country more administrative reform than the republican candidate. But the democratic party loses nothing by advocating the re-election on that ground because of the instructions it has everywhere thrown in his way. The republican party would be willing [illegible] on civil service reform provided its candidate [illegible] pledge to the people that the republican administration will give us more civil service reform than Cleveland has given us. But it will be hard to give this pledge because the last republican administration showed far less devotion to civil service reform than Mr. Cleveland has. Besides, during the campaign of 1884 they made a special effort to belittle this issue and to sneer at the men who were turned out. But it is an important thing that we have to contemplate. It shows that it is a live issue. It is a continual red flag in the face of the professional politicians. It does not get [illegible] people that the party cannot ignore it. The fact that all the democratic party [illegible] and that all substantial criticism of Cleveland's administration is based on [illegible] what Cleveland has done is the standard which the [illegible] service reformers have set to [illegible] this. The success of every [illegible] be measured on party by the [illegible] laws. If it is not an issue that [illegible] on the people, no politicians will take the trouble to fight it.
